

Where the deceased's estate is destitute or has insufficient funds for a funeral service AND where no individual person is willing to make the funeral arrangements, a statutory authority may make the necessary arrangements. The statutory authority will usually be the one caring for the deceased's body. For example,

- the Police
- the Coroner
- the Hospital Registrar

You should contact the relevant authority for more information.